TO THE MEMBERS OF THE U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

The undersigned groups strongly support current efforts in the House of Representatives to enact regulatory reform legislation designed to make federal agencies more accountable to the American public and their elected representatives, to improve the transparency of agency actions, and to establish a level playing field for citizens who work with – and are regulated by – federal agencies.

Sound regulation is not possible unless the full regulatory process is open and meaningful public participation is allowed by agencies. We are pleased that a comprehensive regulatory reform bill, H.R. 2804, the Achieving Less Excess in Regulation and Requiring Transparency (ALERRT) Act, is going to the House floor this week. H.R. 2804 embodies several major principles of accountability, transparency, and fairness, drawn directly from the following individual bills:

- H.R. 2804 – the Achieving Less Excess in Regulation and Requiring Transparency (ALERRT) Act. This bill would require federal agencies to submit monthly and annual reports of planned new rulemakings they will propose or finalize to OMB’s Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (OIRA). OIRA would release information about these upcoming rules, including their estimated costs and benefits, to the public.
- H.R. 2122 – the Regulatory Accountability Act. This bill would update the Administrative Procedure Act of 1946 to deal with the realities of today’s regulatory environment. It is designed to ensure greater transparency during rule development, allow greater public access to the data on which an agency relies, and make agencies consider lower-cost alternatives. This legislation is particularly necessary right now because of the recent growth in the number of billion- and multi-billion dollar rules, which create uncertainty, stifle hiring, and displace workers. Many more such mega-rules will be finalized in the next few years.
- H.R. 1493 – the Sunshine for Regulatory Decrees and Settlements Act. This bill would bring more transparency and accountability to the “sue and settle” process by requiring agencies to give earlier notice and take public comment on proposed settlement agreements obligating agencies to take rulemaking action on a specified timetable. These settlement agreements allow outside advocacy groups to effectively take control of an agency’s agenda and regulatory priorities. The bill would allow stakeholders to have notice of draft settlements and an opportunity – under limited circumstances – to be involved in the negotiation process.
- H.R. 2542 – the Regulatory Flexibility Improvements Act. This bill would expand the scope of required regulatory impact analyses under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (including cumulative impacts), remove current exemptions from impact analyses, and give the SBA Office of Advocacy the authority to issue rules governing federal agency compliance with the RFA.

Taken together, these reforms would allow Congress and the public to reassert control over a federal regulatory bureaucracy that is opaque, unaccountable, and often unfair. Congress must act to reclaim its critical role as overseer of the federal agencies.

The undersigned groups strongly support H.R. 2804, the ALERRT Act, and its comprehensive approach to regulatory reform. We urge you to support this important bill.

Sincerely,
